

LONDON
DEBATE

DUTY TO INVOLVE: WHAT IT MEANS TO COMMUNITY LED DESIGN

DEBATES ARE FREE

LIMITED SPACES

AVAILABLE

WHAT DOES DUTY TO INVOLVE MEAN?

New legislation introduced in April 2009 calls for all local authorities to involve local people in decisions that affect them and their area.

Almost a year on, has this legislation made any difference to how local authorities engage with communities around physical regeneration?

The Glass-House and architecture education organisation Open House will be holding an interactive debate on 16 March 2010 to discuss this important issue, Duty to Involve: what does it mean to community led design?

SPEAKERS INCLUDE:

Rachel Newton, Head of Policy and Research, Urban Forum

Matthew Blumler, Founder and former chair, Quaggy Waterways Action Group (Q.W.A.G)

Beth Kay, Regeneration Officer - Major Projects, London Borough of Brent

Tom Holbrook, Director, 5th Studio

WHO IS IT FOR?

Simple, if you're a community representative, professional, student or just have an interest in the built environment, this debate will be lively, engaging and informative.

HOW DO I TAKE PART?

To ensure your place visit www.theglasshouse.org.uk go to the 'what's on' page and fill in our online London Debate registration form. If you don't have access to our website, call The Glass-House team and we'll send one to you, 0207 490 4583. Be quick, places are on a first come first serve basis!

WHERE/ TOYNBEE HALL, E1 6LS
WHEN/ 16 MARCH 2010
TIME/ REFRESHMENTS FROM
2.30PM, DEBATE 3-5PM
FOR MORE INFORMATION VISIT
WWW.THEGLASSHOUSE.ORG.UK

The
GLASS-HOUSE
Community Led Design

